Dear editors of EM,

we have found out that the interim dean of ESHCC committed plagiarism in her advice. The attachment shows the details. It is a case of straightforward copying and repeated failure to include sources.

This is a serious issue that breaches international standards of academic integrity. These principles are also part of the Netherlands Code of Conduct for Scientific Integrity (2018). See: integrity is not limited to scientific publications in academic journals. 'The principles and standards of this code apply to popular scientific statements, educational material and advices from researchers insofar as this can reasonably be expected'. (page 10)

We do hope you will address this issue in your Magazine.

Sincerely yours,

The Integrity Squad
